THURSDAY, JULY 8, 1915.

An Evening Echo.

A little real earnestness in our work would accomplish wonders; but, alas! we are seldom in earnest.—ANNIE E. LANCASTER.

It is difficult to understand why former Secretary of State Bryan should be singled out for so much criticism. He was as well qualified for the office of secretary of state as some of the other cabinet officers are for the positions they hold.

Every time you buy a package or bottle of food or drugs with a label on it guaranteeing the purity of the food act, remember that a Republican Congress enacted that law and that every vote against it was cast by a Democrat. Ever since its organization the Republican party has been a party of progress and construction and the Democratic party has been a party of opposition and destruction. There is a great deal in that.

Treasury Watchdogs Needed.

The last session of Congress was an extremely extravagant one and yet it appropriated $113,000,000 less than the executive departments urged it to appropriate. Let this fact sink into the minds of those who advocate a national budget system for the United States. That a budget system is desirable, few will question, but the control of the budget board or commission should be in Congress and not in the departments. The reason for this is plain. The head of each department, upon the insistent recommendation of his subordinates, and because of his desire to expand the activities of his office asks Congress for larger appropriations for work already in hand and for new appropriations for new governmental activities. He is naturally impressed with the importance of his department and is more or less actuated by vanity and ambition. Congress, the only branch of government chosen directly by the people and including men from every walk of life is not influenced by personal ambition so far as departmental expenditures are concerned, and upon that body we must rely for the check upon extravagance.

A budget system we certainly need, but not in the control of men who ask for $113,000,000 more than a liberal Congress will grant.

A Thrifty Neighbor.

Any woman who, in an emergency, cannot cook and serve a dinner, make a dress or trim a hat is only half a woman. Economy is no disgrace; any fool can spend money and waste it, but it takes judgment to spend wisely for value received.—Mrs. Arthur G. Learned.

The following is not a piece of summer fiction but an actual conversation, the names alone being fictitious.

"Dear me! I do feel so happy," said Mrs. Collins as she dropped down into a chair in Mrs. Whitmarsh's parlor. "I've just been down town shopping. I stopped at the bank and deposited my month's savings. I had ten dollars to deposit."

"I declare," exclaimed Mrs. Whitmarsh. "I don't see how you do it. Your husband doesn't give you a cent more than mine gives me, there aren't any less in your family and you seem to have just as many things as I do. But as for my savings! Why, we are always behind on some bill or other. How in the world do you do it?"

"Well, you see," said Mrs. Collins modestly, "my father and mother taught me to save when I was a girl. I began then to put my nickels into a little savings bank. Now whenever I think of a way of saving I always put the difference between what I might have spent and what I do spend right into my bank. If it is only five cents, in it goes, and if it's two dollars I make myself put that in, too."

"But where do you save?" interrupted Mrs. Whitmarsh.

"Oh," answered Mrs. Collins, "I'm always on the watch for chances. That's part of the secret. Just the other morning it struck me—for the first time, strange to say—that breakfast cereals might be cheaper by the half dozen. There is only five cents difference when you buy six boxes, but then you save the bother of ordering the six separately."

"I try to make my household expenses for each month come within a certain limit, too, and it at the end of the month I have spent less than I expected, the sum saved goes into my bank. I buy some cheap cuts of meat; for instance, a brisket of beef to boil and press, or pot roast. You can make ever so many good soups out of the scraps, too, and John is very fond of soup. I make cream soups out of milk and the water in which vegetables are boiled. I dry vegetables, too. Do you know that dried celery leaves makes almost as good a soup as the fresh celery itself?"

"Potatoes and onions and such things I lay in a supply of in the fall. We have a good vegetable cellar, you know. This last year I put down forty dozen eggs also. My butter I buy direct from the maker."

"Can you save much on your clothes?" asked Mrs. Whitmarsh.

"I think I save most there by going without things. So often when you think you simply must have a new dress or a new hat you find you really can get along pretty well without. If you do need a new suit it is a pretty good plan to buy it in the off season, when things are really marked down. Well, I have talked as if I were the best planner in the world, haven't I? Probably my neighbors wish I would spend more on my clothes, but it does make you feel rich to have something sure laid by in the bank for the future."

Republican Constructive Legislation.

Among the numerous achievements to which the Republican party can justly point with pride is the enactment of the reclamation law, passed in 1902 by a Republican Congress and signed by a Republican president. Under the provisions of that law, reclamation projects have been constructed affording water supply sufficient for 1,300,000 acres of land. During 1913 the crop production on land already supplied with water exceeded in value $15,700,000.

This production was from an area of only 700,000 acres then under cultivation. The last annual report of the reclamation service shows that with relatively small additional expense, the total acreage supplied with water can be increased to 3,000,000 acres.

Considering the immense amount of work to be done in the construction of reclamation projects on a plan designed to be permanent, it is remarkable what rapid progress has been made. The first considerable amount of irrigation on government projects was reached in 1906, when 32,000 acres of arid land were supplied with water. In 1913, which is the latest date for which statistics are available, the total of 700,000 acres was reached.

The reclamation of arid land under government projects is still in its infancy, and has necessarily been slow because both the government officials and the farmers have been compelled to learn by experience what methods are most successful.

Development will be far more rapid in the future. Vast areas of land that were previously abandoned to sage brush, jack rabbits and coyotes, will, for all time to come, make pleasant homes for thrifty American farmers, produce food for residents of American cities and add enormously to the total wealth of the nation.

These irrigation farmers are raising alfalfa, fruit, grain, vegetables—practically every farm product that can be grown anywhere. The alfalfa supplies feed for live stock. The live stock furnishes raw material for the packing houses. The laborers in the packing houses are buyers of all kinds of food and clothing, and other necessities of life. The $15,000,000 of products on irrigated land in 1913, was but the beginning of a chain of business that furnished profitable employment for thousands of men and women.

The farmers of the reclamation act anticipated that development must be slow, and, therefore, they provided for settlement by homeseekers under a plan of payment by installments covering a ten year period, which period Congress has since extended to twenty years. The purpose of the act was to provide more farm homes and extend the area of productive lands. While the act was a departure from accepted ideas as to the proper scope of government, experience has proven the wisdom of government initiative in an undertaking so large that private enterprise could not be expected to invest unless given concessions that might ultimately be found against the interests of homeseekers.

Although President Wilson has declared that the Republican party has not had a new idea in thirty years, the reclamation act stands out as a new idea alongside the pure food law, the postal savings bank law and the parcel post law as a mute but permanent evidence of the constructive policies of that party.

Arbitration All Right.

"Arbitration of disputes between nations is all right. It must not be forgotten that it takes the consent of both parties to start arbitration proper. Austria refused the offer of Serbia and the pleas of France, Russia and Great Britain to submit the Austro-Serbian difficulty to arbitration. Following Austria's refusal, we all know what happened and how it happened. The war that has followed has been an attempt by Eu-

Summer-Spoiled Skin
Removed by Absorption

As undue summer exposure usually leaves an undesirable surface of tan, redness or roughness, often freckles, too, the sensible thing to do is to remove such surface. There's nothing better for this than ordinary mercurized wax, which actually absorbs an unwholesome complexion. The thin layer of surface skin is itself absorbed, gently, gradually, so there's no inconvenience, no detention, no redness. Spread the wax lightly over the entire face at bedtime and take it off in the morning with warm water. If you will get a ounce of mercurized wax at the drugstore, use it for a week or so you may expect marked improvement daily. When the underlying skin is wholly in view your complexion will be a marvel of spotless purity and beauty.

Don't let those summer wrinkles worry you; worry breeds more wrinkles. Banish them by bathing the face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz. dissolved in 1/2 pt. witch hazel. Used daily for a while this will be found wonderfully effective.

Double-Headed Device.

A Wheeling citizen has patented a passenger exit register for cars, intended to act as a check on conductors who feel like getting an increase of salary without applying to the board for it. By means of his device attached to a pay-as-you-enter car the exit as well as the entrance of a passenger car is registered automatically. The conductor who can beat the double-headed device is competent to be superintendent of the line.—Parkersburg State Journal.

The New Drug Law.

Put your Uncle Sammy on the job if you want it done up now. This has been strikingly demonstrated in the execution of the new federal drug law. One of the most convincing evidences that this law is effective is the commotion that now obtains among both usurers and vendors of habit-forming drugs.

Bad as is the use of intoxicating liquors, in some respects the drug habit is even worse. The drug habit may be contracted in a few weeks, while the liquor habit at its worst is, as a rule, the work of months and even years.

The drug habit is much easier formed than the liquor habit, and many practice it secretly for months before its effects are pronounced enough to attract attention. The final end of the drug victim is mental and physical wreckage and disgrace for his family.

The enforcement of the new law will undoubtedly result in the release of many victims from the terrible slavery of the drug habit, but the largest result will be the cessation of the making of new slaves.

Truly, we are making progress in these later years of Our Lord.—Wheeling Telegraph.

TRAVELETTE

By MRS. K. A. BELGRADE.

BELGRADE.

A city with a past full of blood and scandal, modern Belgrade is, nevertheless, outwardly a town of charm. "White City" is the Serbian meaning of its name, and is borne out by the many snowy buildings set in abundant greenery. Everywhere, but the town has an air of pleasant Bohemianism, reminding one of Paris.

In the afternoon the Kalemegdan, or public gardens, is thronged with folks—family groups picnicking under the trees and sipping books in open air cafes, while a military band dispenses music from a kiosk and innumerable officers in opera bouffe uniforms flirt with equally numerous nurse girls.

In the evening the center of life in Belgrade is the Terazija, a boulevard over a mile in length, overtopped by the golden domes of the new palace. This all-important street commences in its length the better part of the city, the hotels, the theaters and the shops. In the evening it is a place of light and thronged with people, but there is none of the crude finery of other Balkan towns to be seen on Belgrade's boulevard. Top hats and Paquin gowns and Viennese toilets and brilliant uniforms prevail.

for Belgrade is ultra-metropolitan. A place rich in glory and romance is Topchider Park, which was the residence of Milosh, the founder of the Drenovitch dynasty. It is a charming bit of natural woodland, containing splendid oak and elm trees, brooks and miles of lawn sprinkled with flowers. The walled draga resort of the ill-fated queen, Elizabeth, Empress Michael was founded in 1868, and a monument was erected upon the spot. Most of all, however, is the place associated with the notorious king Milan, who made this beautiful woodland the rendezvous for most of his amours.

Traveling Man's Experience.

"In the summer of 1888 I had a very severe attack of cholera morbus. Two physicians worked over me from four a. m. to six p. m. without giving me any relief and then told me not to expect me to live; that I had best telegraph for my family. Instead of doing so, I gave the hotel porter fifty cents and told him to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and take no substitute. I took a double dose according to the directions and went to sleep after the second dose. At five o'clock the next morning I was called by my order and took a train for my next stopping point, a well man, but feeling rather shaky from the severity of the attack," writes H. W. Ireland, Louisville, Ky. Obtainable everywhere. Advertisement.

A NOTABLE CATHEDRAL

Some of the most remarkable architectural features ever attempted in this country are included in the magnificent Swedenborgian cathedral now being erected at Bryn Athryn on the side of Philadelphia. The structure is of medieval design, embracing many columns, arches and windows, no two of which are exactly alike. It is being built entirely of stone, and the work is all being done by hand by the same process used in the building of the older cathedrals of Europe. The architects designed it aimed to create dignity and simplicity rather than elaborate ornamentation.

This great church is to be 300 feet long by 100 feet wide, with high vaulted ceilings and a Gothic tower 150 feet high. It is to be completed this year, and will be formally dedicated as the cathedral of all the Swedenborgians of this country. The cost will considerably exceed a million dollars, and it will be a gift from the Swedenborgian denomination to a Pittsburgh millionaire of that name.
